DETAILED ACTION

Election/Restrictions

Restriction to one of the following inventions is required under 35 U.S.C. 121:

- I. Claims 1-9, drawn to a method for controlling a blood pump, classified in class 600, subclass 18.
- II. Claims 10 -18, drawn to a controller, classified in class 604, subclass 4.
- III. Claims 19-23, drawn to a computer readable medium, classified in class 128, subclass 898.

The inventions are distinct, each from the other because of the following reasons:

Inventions II, III as compared to claim I are related as product and process of use. The inventions can be shown to be distinct if either or both of the following can be shown: (1) the process for using the product as claimed can be practiced with another materially different product or (2) the product as claimed can be used in a materially different process of using that product. See MPEP § 806.05(h). In the instant case the products could be used to control a pump that is pumping other fluids other than blood and do not require any means for determining heart rates or pump speed. As recited now, the blood pump is only capable of being controlled in response to the calculation of a ratio and not necessarily so. The machine readable media reads upon media merely for taking ratios, the ratios can be any machine code. No code for sensors input or output code for controlling the pump is recited and thus as claimed could be used for calculating ratios of any input.

Inventions II and III are related as combination and subcombination. Inventions in this relationship are distinct if it can be shown that (1) the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed for patentability, and (2) that the subcombination has utility by itself or in other combinations (MPEP § 806.05(c)). In the instant case, the combination as claimed does not require the particulars of the subcombination as claimed because the controller does not require any internal calculations. The subcombination has separate utility such as for merely taking ratios of numbers.

If applicant were to amend the apparatus claims to include the speed sensor and heart rate inputs (code for receiving such inputs from a sensor), as well as a means for calculating the ratio and an output for controlling the pump based upon the calculated ratio, the examiner would consider rejoining the claims for further prosecution.

Applicant is advised that the reply to this requirement to be complete must include (i) an election of a species or invention to be examined even though the requirement be traversed (37 CFR 1.143) and (ii) identification of the claims encompassing the elected invention.

The election of an invention or species may be made with or without traverse. To reserve a right to petition, the election must be made with traverse. If the reply does not distinctly and specifically point out supposed errors in the restriction requirement, the election shall be treated as an election without traverse.

Should applicant traverse on the ground that the inventions or species are not patentably distinct, applicant should submit evidence or identify such evidence now of record showing the inventions or species to be obvious variants or clearly admit on the record that this is the case. In either instance, if the examiner finds one of the inventions unpatentable over the prior art, the evidence or admission may be used in a rejection under 35 U.S.C.103(a) of the other invention.
